THINGS WORTH SEEING

William Faversham in the stirring American play, "The Squaw Man" comes to the Hollis Street this week, and Henrietta Crosman in her latest and greatest modern comedy hit, "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy," appears at the Tremont. At the Colonial Ethel Barrymore for her second week plays "Captain Jinks," and on Thursday a special matinee, Ibsen's "A Doll's House." The Globe presents "The Wizard of Oz," and the Grand Opera House "How Hearts Are Broken." "A Brass Monkey" is the offering by the John Craig Stock Company at the Bijou, and "Taps" plays at the Castle Square. The attractions remaining over are Mrs. Fiske in "The New York Idea," at the Majestic; May Irwin in "Mrs. Wilson-Andrews," at the Park, and "Ben Hur," at the Boston. There are pleasing vaudeville shows at the Orpheum, Keith's, and the Howard. The burlesque at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace is of a high order.

Old South Meeting House—Washington and Milk streets. Built 1729 to replace wooden church which had stood on this site. Gov. John Winthrop's home, since 1669. Here many town meetings were held in massacre and tea tax times. Used by British as a riding school, 1775. Use as church abandoned 1872. Revolutionary relics. 9 to 6. Fee 25 cents.

The Boston Public Library in Copley Square is one of the foremost architectural monuments of America, costing $2,500,000. The architects were McKim, Mead & White; the sculptures by Augustus St. Gaudens and D. C. French. The mural paintings by Puvis de Chavannes, Edwin A. Abbey and John S. Sargent attract thousands of visitors to this beautiful structure, which contains 900,000 volumes.

The collections of the Museum of Fine Arts are among the first in the world, and illustrate the art of Egypt, Greece, Rome, the Orient and modern Europe and America. The galleries contain paintings, sculpture, textiles, ceramics, iron and wood work, prints, together with examples of precious objects. There are also numerous reproductions and an art library.

Blanchard, King & Co., are now exhibiting their exclusive importations of Scotch shirtings in novel patterns and effects. This is the best time in the year to place orders for negligee shirts.

Macullar Parker Company are having their annual mark down sale of winter clothing in the Men's and Boys' departments as well as in Furnishing Goods.

The Collver Tours Company's remodelled office at 368 Boylston Street is one of the "smartest" tourist offices anywhere. The intention is to have the environment reflect the high plane on which this Company's tours are planned. Their Japan, Round the World and South America tours are decidedly "Away-from-the-Usual."

Miss M. F. Fisk, 144 Tremont Street, is giving the ladies a great opportunity in those 12 Button Length Gloves at $2.27 a pair, that are usually $3 00, they are in all colors and fit perfectly. Another item of great interest are the Tailored and Lingerie Waists which Miss Fisk is constantly receiving in the latest models.

Among the "January Bargains" of more than ordinary interest are those to be picked up at Charles E. Lauriat Co.'s bookstore, 385 Washington Street, opp. Franklin Street. In clearing up after a phenomenal holiday business, many odd lots, sets and single books, have turned up that are to be sold out before the annual inventory next month. It will pay to step in and look at these.

The certainty of obtaining fur garments that are not merely rich and beautiful in appearance but also durable is one of the pleasures you derive from shopping at A. N. Cook & Co.'s Tremont Street store.

Josiah T. Dyer, the haberdasher on Boylston Street, is making radical reductions in the prices of high-class men's wear previous to the alterations which are to be made in his store.

The Russian Importing Company, 355 Boylston Street, announce a great reduction sale on account of their removal to 429 Boylston Street, and as they are determined to decrease their stock to a minimum they will therefore sell regardless of cost.

The Smith Patterson Co., at 52 Summer Street, are showing a very exclusive line of hall clocks ranging in price from $100 upwards, also a superior line of watches from the more moderate prices up to the most expensive watches made. All goods purchased from this firm will be found thoroughly reliable.

At the Castle Square, "Raffles," is the attraction, and the John Craig Stock Company plays "An Enemy of the People," at the Bijou. The Grand Opera House present "Isaacs from the Bowery." At the Orpheum Theatre for the second and last week Mr. Henry De Vries is presenting his remarkable playlet, "A Case of Arson." SHOPPING NEWS

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

In winter automobiling a fur coat is a necessity. A. N. Cook & Co., Tremont Street, have made a study of securing the most suitable and durable skins for their men's and women's automobile coats.

The Russian Importing Company, 355 Boylston Street, announce a great reduction sale on account of their removal to 429 Boylston Street, and as they are determined to decrease their stock to a minimum they will therefore sell regardless of cost.

The Smith Patterson Co., at 52 Summer Street, are showing a very exclusive line of hall clocks ranging in price from $100 upwards, also a superior line of watches from the more moderate prices up to the most expensive watches made. All goods purchased from this firm will be found thoroughly reliable.

Macullar Parker Company are having their annual mark down sale of winter clothing in the Men's and Boys' departments as well as in Furnishing Goods.

The Collver Tours Company's remodelled office at 368 Boylston Street is one of the "smartest" tourist offices anywhere. The intention is to have the environment reflect the high plane on which this Company's tours are planned. Their Japan, Round the World and South America tours are decidedly "Away-from-the-Usual."

Miss M. F. Fisk, 144 Tremont Street, is giving the ladies a great opportunity in those 12 Button Length Gloves at $2.27 a pair, that are usually $3.00, they are in all colors and fit perfectly. Another item of great interest are the Tailored and Lingerie Waists which Miss Fisk is constantly receiving in the latest models.

Blanchard, King & Co., are now exhibiting their exclusive importations of Scotch shirtings in novel patterns and effects. This is the best time in the year to place orders for negligee shirts.

The toilet parlors of Dr. Rudolph Mertin at 564 Washington Street, opposite the Adams House, are the largest in New England, employing thirty-five expert operators. The hair dressing department makes a specialty of marcel waving and carries a first-class line of hair goods and toilet articles. Dr. Mertin's reputation as a chiropodist is well known.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have just completed their annual inventory of stock and their shelves and counters are now filled with books that have been marked down during the inventory to the point necessary to quickly dispose of them. As this is the first sale of the kind in their new store (opposite the head of Franklin St.), it is being made a specially notable one.

If you want a set of the works of your favorite author, in handsome, permanent library form, at a price lower than you can get at any other season of the year, step in to Charles E. Lauriat Co.'s store, opposite Franklin Street, and see the tempting prices quoted during their inventory sale now in progress.

The extensive alterations made at Dyer's furnishing store on Boylston Street, have made it doubly attractive and also gives them more room to show their excellent line of men's wear.

Beyond dispute the florist par excellence of Boston is Thomas F. Galvin. We were well repaid a visit made to his Tremont Street and Back Bay stores by a sight of a great display of rare orchids and various hued chrysanthemums, American beauty roses, English and Russian violets. The business done is remarkable.

The Smith Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street, do a very large wholesale business in diamonds and precious stones as well as retail, thereby enabling them to buy in a much more advantageous way than for retail trade only. They carry one of the most attractive stocks in the trade, and their prices cannot be equalled for the same quality of goods.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the winter.

Blanchard, King & Co., are now exhibiting their exclusive importations of Scotch shirtings in novel patterns and effects. This is the best time in the year to place orders for negligee shirts.

At the linen department in the L. P. Hollander & Co.'s store they are showing a line of fine table linen in exclusive designs. Luncheon and dinner sets, fine damask cloths and lace scarf centrepieces in a large variety of patterns at prices to meet the closest competition.

The Russian Importing Company, 429 Boylston Street, display a beautiful and attractive line of goods made by the Russian peasants in brass, copper, bronze, silver and woodenware, suitable for home decoration, prizes, etc.; also homespun linen, hand-made centrepieces, doylies and scarfs in drawn work, laces and waist patterns. Visitors are always welcome.

E. T. Slattery Company, on Tremont Street, have in their window some beautiful embroidered gowns, stylish tailor-made suits, French neckwear and millinery. One cannot pass up Tremont Street without noticing this beautiful display.

At Miss M. F. Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, is shown the most attractive tailored and lingerie waists that can be desired, they are all made specially for Miss Fisk's trade and fit beautifully.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

First appearances of Ermete Novelli, the distinguished Italian player, are made this week at the Majestic, the following being his repertoire: Monday, "Louis XI"; Tuesday, "Papa Lebonnard"; Wednesday, "Merchant of Venice"; Thursday, "King Lear"; Friday, "Morte Civile" (Civil Death); Saturday matinee, "Louis XI"; Saturday evening, "Burbero Benefico" (Benevolent Bear). At the Tremont, Robert Mantell continues his classic revivals with Shakspere's "Othello" on Monday and Tuesday nights; Bulwer's "Richelieu" on Wednesday afternoon; Shakspere's "The Merchant of Venice" on Wednesday and Thursday nights and Saturday afternoon; and Shakspere's "Richard III." on Friday and Saturday nights. Maxine Elliott returns to the Hollis with her success of last year, "Her Great Match," and at the Globe, "Tom, Dick and Harry," is the attraction. The Grand Opera House presents "No Mother to Guide Her," and the Castle Square offers "The Eternal City." At the Bijou the John Craig Stock Company plays "Lend Me Your Wife." "The Little Cherub," at the Park Theatre; "The Grand Mogul," at the Colonial; and "Way Down East," at the Boston are the attractions remaining over this week. Vaudeville features of a fine order are presented at the Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard. The Columbia, Lyceum and the Palace entertain as usual with good burlesque.

State Street previous to the revolution, was King Street. In 1702 was proclaimed, in this street, the accession of Anne to be Queen of England. Opposite 28 State Street is the spot, marked by a circle in the pavement, where the citizens were killed and wounded by Captain Preston's soldiers, March 5, 1770. Down this street to the wharf, escorted by the U. S. Marshal and his thousand deputies, U. S. marines, regulars, and the entire state militia, one black man, in chains, was sent back to slavery. But in 1861-65 the Massachusetts Volunteers marched up State Street on the way to the South, to help free the black man.

28 State Street is the site of the Provincial Custom House, Royal Exchange Tavern and U. S. Bank.

27 State Street is the site of the first church in Boston, built in 1632 of logs, with thatched roof.

At the Southeast Corner of State and Washington Streets, Henry Knox, afterwards General and Secretary of War, was a bookseller's apprentice.

The Town Pump stood at the northeast corner of Washington and State Streets. On the northwest corner was the first store for the sale of merchandise in Boston, kept by John Coggan.

The finest showing of ladies' gloves is at Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, she has correct gloves for street, church, theatre and party occasions, ranging in price from $1.50 upwards.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have recently bought in several valuable private libraries, which they are now showing in the "old book room," in their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. This room is a fine light room in the basement and is a most attractive place for lovers of old books to spend an occasional half hour.

At the linen department in the L. P. Hollander & Co.'s store they are showing a line of fine table linen in exclusive designs. Luncheon and dinner sets, fine damask cloths and lace scarf centrepieces in a large variety of patterns at prices to meet the closest competition.

The Russian Importing Company, 429 Boylston Street, display a beautiful and attractive line of goods made by the Russian peasants in brass, copper, bronze, silver and woodenware, suitable for home decoration, prizes, etc.; also homespun linen, hand-made centrepieces, doylies and scarfs in drawn work, laces and waist patterns. Visitors are always welcome.

E. T. Slattery Company, on Tremont Street, have in their window some beautiful embroidered gowns, stylish tailor-made suits, French neckwear and millinery. One cannot pass up Tremont Street without noticing this beautiful display.

The extensive alterations made at Dyer's furnishing store on Boylston Street, have made it doubly attractive and also gives them more room to show their excellent line of men's wear.

Beyond dispute the florist par excellence of Boston is Thomas F. Galvin. We were well repaid a visit made to his Tremont Street and Back Bay stores by a sight of a great display of rare orchids and various hued chrysanthemums, American beauty roses, English and Russian violets. The business done is remarkable.

The Smith Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street, do a very large wholesale business in diamonds and precious stones as well as retail, thereby enabling them to buy in a much more advantageous way than for retail trade only. They carry one of the most attractive stocks in the trade, and their prices cannot be equalled for the same quality of goods.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the winter.

The toilet parlors of Dr. Rudolph Mertin at 564 Washington Street, opposite the Adams House, are the largest in New England, employing thirty-five expert operators. The hair dressing department makes a specialty of marcel waving and carries a first-class line of hair goods and toilet articles. Dr. Mertin's reputation as a chiropodist is well known.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

During this the final week of the stay of Robert Mantell in Boston at the Tremont, that versatile actor is seen in three of Shakespeare's plays—"Hamlet," on Monday night and Wednesday afternoon; "Othello," on Tuesday evening, and "Julius Caesar," Wednesday night, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon. Popular Chauncey Olcott brings his show, "Eileen Asthore," to the Boston. Ermete Novelli, the Italian actor, closes his engagement at the Majestic this week with these plays: Monday, "Othello"; Tuesday, "Kean"; Wednesday, "Shylock"; Thursday, "Oedipus the King"; Friday, "Hamlet"; Saturday matinee, "The Taming of the Shrew," and Saturday evening, "Civil Death."

It is the last week of the John Craig Stock Company at the Bijou, and the following repertoire is offered: "A Trip to Chinatown," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; "Prince Karl," with an afterpiece, "A Tragedy Rehearsed," on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A revival of Nat Goodwin's play, "An American Citizen," takes place at the Castle Square, and "Texas," is the attraction at the Globe. Charles T. Aldrich returns to the Grand Opera House in "Secret Service Sam." Continued attractions are: Miss Maxine Elliott in "Her Great Match," at the Hollis, Hattie Williams in "The Little Cherub," at the Park, and "The Grand Mogul," at the Colonial. There are excellent vaudeville bills at the Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard. Pleasing burlesque may be seen at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

State Street previous to the revolution, was King Street. In 1702 was proclaimed, in this street, the accession of Anne to be Queen of England. Opposite 28 State Street is the spot, marked by a circle in the pavement, where the citizens were killed and wounded by Captain Preston's soldiers, March 5, 1770. Down this street to the wharf, escorted by the U. S. Marshal and his thousand deputies, U. S. marines, regulars, and the entire state militia, one black man, in chains, was sent back to slavery. But in 1861-65 the Massachusetts Volunteers marched up State Street on the way to the South, to help free the black man.

28 State Street is the site of the Provincial Custom House, Royal Exchange Tavern and U. S. Bank.

27 State Street is the site of the first church in Boston, built in 1632 of logs, with thatched roof.

The Town Pump stood at the northeast corner of Washington and State Streets. On the northwest corner was the first store for the sale of merchandise in Boston, kept by John Coggan.

The most important sale of Ladies' Gloves in Boston this season is now going on at Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street. 400 pairs of 12 Button length gloves—in all colors, just from the custom house, that were imported to sell for $3.50 a pair are being offered at $2.50 on account of their late arrival—which is almost giving them away.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have recently bought in several valuable private libraries, which they are now showing in the "old book room," in their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. This room is a fine light room in the basement and is a most attractive place for lovers of old books to spend an occasional half hour.

At the linen department in the L. P. Hollander & Co.'s store they are showing a line of fine table linen in exclusive designs. Luncheon and dinner sets, fine damask cloths and lace scarf centrepieces in a large variety of patterns at prices to meet the closest competition.

The Russian Importing Company, 429 Boylston Street, display a beautiful and attractive line of goods made by the Russian peasants in brass, copper, bronze, silver and woodenware, suitable for home decoration, prizes, etc.; also homespun linen, hand-made centrepieces, doylies and scarfs in drawn work, laces and waist patterns. Visitors are always welcome.

E. T. Slattery Company, on Tremont Street, have in their window some beautiful embroidered gowns, stylish tailor-made suits, French neckwear and millinery. One cannot pass up Tremont Street without noticing this beautiful display.

The extensive alterations made at Dyer's furnishing store on Boylston Street, have made it doubly attractive and also gives them more room to show their excellent line of men's wear.

Beyond dispute the florist par excellence of Boston is Thomas F. Galvin. We were well repaid a visit made to his Tremont Street and Back Bay stores by a sight of a great display of rare orchids and various hued chrysanthemums, American beauty roses, English and Russian violets. The business done is remarkable.

The Smith Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street, do a very large wholesale business in diamonds and precious stones as well as retail, thereby enabling them to buy in a much more advantageous way than for retail trade only. They carry one of the most attractive stocks in the trade, and their prices cannot be equalled for the same quality of goods.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the winter.

The toilet parlors of Dr. Rudolph Mertin at 564 Washington Street, opposite the Adams House, are the largest in New England, employing thirty-five expert operators. The hair dressing department makes a specialty of marcel waving and carries a first-class line of hair goods and toilet articles. Dr. Mertin's reputation as a chiropodist is well known.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

Williams and Walker, the Negro humorists, reappear at the Globe this week with their musical hit, "Abyssinia," and at the Grand Opera House there is the spectacular melodrama, "The Four Corners of the Earth." A satirical farce entitled, "Mr. Hopkinson," for the first time here is given at the Tremont, and the Majestic offers for the initial engagement on any stage De Koven and Stange's fantastic musical piece, "The Snow Man." At the Hollis, William Gillette and Marie Doro present "Clarice," a play that proved very popular with Boston playgoers last season. "East Lynne" is revived at the Castle Square. Continuances are: Hattie Williams in "The Little Cherub," at the Park; "The Grand Mogul," at the Colonial, and Chauncey Olcott in "Eileen Asthore," at the Boston. There are excellent vaudeville bills at the Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard, while burlesque of a good order holds forth at the Columbia, Palace and Lyceum.

State Street previous to the revolution, was King Street. In 1702 was proclaimed, in this street, the accession of Anne to be Queen of England. Opposite 28 State Street is the spot, marked by a circle in the pavement, where the citizens were killed and wounded by Captain Preston's soldiers, March 5, 1770. Down this street to the wharf, escorted by the U. S. Marshal and his thousand deputies, U. S. marines, regulars, and the entire state militia, one black man, in chains, was sent back to slavery. But in 1861-65 the Massachusetts Volunteers marched up State Street on the way to the South, to help free the black man.

At the Southeast Corner of State and Washington Streets, Henry Knox, afterwards General and Secretary of War, was a bookseller's apprentice.

28 State Street is the site of the Provincial Custom House, Royal Exchange Tavern and U. S. Bank.

27 State Street is the site of the first church in Boston, built in 1632 of logs, with thatched roof.

The Town Pump stood at the northeast corner of Washington and State Streets. On the northwest corner was the first store for the sale of merchandise in Boston, kept by John Coggan.

Captain Robert Keayne, the first commander of the Artillery Company known as the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, lived on the southeast corner of State and Washington Streets.

The most important sale of Ladies' Gloves in Boston this season is now going on at Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street. 400 pairs of 12 Button length gloves—in all colors, just from the custom house, that were imported to sell for $3.50 a pair are being offered at $2.50 on account of their late arrival—which is almost giving them away.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have recently bought in several valuable private libraries, which they are now showing in the "old book room," in their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. This room is a fine light room in the basement and is a most attractive place for lovers of old books to spend an occasional half hour.

At the linen department in the L. P. Hollander & Co.'s store they are showing a line of fine table linen in exclusive designs. Luncheon and dinner sets, fine damask cloths and lace scarf centrepieces in a large variety of patterns at prices to meet the closest competition.

The Russian Importing Company, 429 Boylston Street, display a beautiful and attractive line of goods made by the Russian peasants in brass, copper, bronze, silver and woodenware, suitable for home decoration, prizes, etc.; also homespun linen, hand-made centrepieces, doylies and scarfs in drawn work, laces and waist patterns. Visitors are always welcome.

E. T. Slattery Company, on Tremont Street, have in their window some beautiful embroidered gowns, stylish tailor-made suits, French neckwear and millinery. One cannot pass up Tremont Street without noticing this beautiful display.

The extensive alterations made at Dyer's furnishing store on Boylston Street, have made it doubly attractive and also gives them more room to show their excellent line of men's wear.

Beyond dispute the florist par excellence of Boston is Thomas F. Galvin. We were well repaid a visit made to his Tremont Street and Back Bay stores by a sight of a great display of rare orchids and various hued chrysanthemums, American beauty roses, English and Russian violets. The business done is remarkable.

The Smith Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street, do a very large wholesale business in diamonds and precious stones as well as retail, thereby enabling them to buy in a much more advantageous way than for retail trade only. They carry one of the most attractive stocks in the trade, and their prices cannot be equalled for the same quality of goods.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the winter.

The toilet parlors of Dr. Rudolph Mertin at 564 Washington Street, opposite the Adams House, are the largest in New England, employing thirty-five expert operators. The hair dressing department makes a specialty of marcel waving and carries a first-class line of hair goods and toilet articles. Dr. Mertin's reputation as a chiropodist is well known.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

For this week at the Colonial, "Joe" Weber and his company present for the first time in this city, "Dream City," and a travesty on the opera Lohengrin entitled, "The Magic Knight." "Joe" Welch in his new play, "The Shoemaker," comes to the Grand Opera House, and "As Ye Sow," returns to the Boston. There is a revival of Blanche Bates's famous play, "Under Two Flags," at the Castle Square. "The Snow Man," continues at the Majestic through Friday night and leaves for New York to open Shubert's New Lyric Theatre. On Saturday afternoon Henry Woodruff begins his engagement with "Brown of Harvard," at the Majestic. The attractions remaining over for the entire week are "Mr. Hopkinson," at the Tremont; Hattie Williams in "The Little Cherub," at the Park; William Gillette in "Clarice," at the Hollis, and Williams and Walker in "Abyssinia," at the Globe. The vaudeville bills at Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard are excellent. Amusing burlesque is given at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

City Hall, School Street, built 1862-65, on the site of the old one, at a cost of $500,000. It is constructed of Concord granite and was considered, when finished, to have ample accommodations for the city department for many years, but a large number of the departments are located in adjoining buildings. In front of the building is a fine statue of Franklin, erected in 1856, also the statue of Josiah Quincy, erected in 1879. He was a member of Congress, 1805-13; Mayor of Boston, 1823-28; President of Harvard College, 1829-45.

King's Chapel, corner of School and Tremont Streets, built of wood in 1688, rebuilt of stone in 1749-54, is a massive building, the walls constructed of Quincy granite. The portico was built in 1789 from funds partly raised by an oratorio in the chapel, at which General Washington attended "attired in a black velvet suit, and gave five guineas." The organ was purchased in England in 1756. The chapel has marble busts of its former pastors, Freeman, Greenwood, Peabody and Foote, and mural monuments of Apthorp, Appleton, Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Joseph May; a marble tablet in memory of General Stevenson, Col. Revere and twelve other members of the parish, who died in the army in 1861-65. The chevalier de Saint Sauveur remains placed in a tomb September, 1778.

In 1688, Sir Edmund Andros seized a part of the burying ground to erect the chapel. In 1710 it was enlarged. Under the chapel are a number of tombs in which are interred a large number of remains of former members of the society.

Different form everything else. Every article in this shop bears the earmarks of oddity, quaintness and beauty, and is the product of Russian peasant handicraft. Artistic brass and copper ware in infinite variety can be found at the Russian Importing Company's, 429 Boylston Street.

The Paris model gowns for afternoon and calling use and the smart English walking suits shown by L. P. Hollander & Co., on Boylston Street, are liberally selected these days by some of the best dressed ladies of Boston and New England for their spring costumes.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, are showing their spring overcoats. It is worth while to examine the stock both for men and boys.

The Smith Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street, do a very large wholesale business in diamonds and precious stones as well as retail, thereby enabling them to buy in a much more advantageous way than for retail trade only. They carry one of the most attractive stocks in the trade, and their prices cannot be equalled for the same quality of goods.

The E. T. Slattery Company's importations for the spring season are attracting widespread attention. Their collection of suits, coats, costumes, millinery and French novelties have never been surpassed.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have recently bought in several valuable private libraries, which they are now showing in the "old book room," in their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. This room is a fine light room in the basement and is a most attractive place for lovers of old books to spend an occasional half hour.

Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street haberdasher, is displaying some attractive novelties in soft shirts, fancy waistcoats, neckwear and hosiery for the coming season. He believes in the early showing of these goods and is always one of the first to show novelties.

The Hall & Hancock Co., at 420 Washington Street, are exhibiting their spring fashions in men's hats. The special hat they are selling for $3.50 is the best in workmanship, quality and style that can be produced for the money.

A very attractive shop to visit this Easter season is Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, her lines are all specialties. Gloves, shirt waists, jewelry, veiling, neckwear and belts. Her gloves are made in Europe in the latest styles and colors, the lingerie and tailored waists are perfect in shape and style, and the veils, neckwear and belts are always the correct things.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

The entire company from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, comes to the Boston this week and presents the following grand operas: Monday evening, "Faust;" Tuesday evening, "Tosca;" Wednesday afternoon, "Madame Butterfly;" Wednesday evening, "Tristan und Isolde;" Thursday evening, "Martha;" Friday evening, "Tannhauser;" Saturday afternoon, "Aida;" and Saturday evening, a double bill, "Haensel und Gretel," and "Pagliacci." At the Castle Square the fifth in the series of classic plays, Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice," is given, and the Globe presents "Arizona." "Uncle Tom's Cabin," rewritten and acted by a company of "all-white" players is the attraction at the Grand Opera House. The plays remaining over are "Mr. Hopkinson," at the Tremont; "The Snow-man," at the Majestic; "Dream City" and the "Magic Knight," at the Colonial; William Gillette in "Clarice," at the Hollis, and Hattie Williams in "The Little Cherub," at the Park. The Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard offer fine vaudeville, and pleasing burlesque is shown at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

City Hall, School Street, built 1862-65, on the site of the old one, at a cost of $500,000. It is constructed of Concord granite and was considered, when finished, to have ample accommodations for the city department for many years, but a large number of the departments are located in adjoining buildings. In front of the building is a fine statue of Franklin, erected in 1856, also the statue of Josiah Quincy, erected in 1879. He was a member of Congress, 1805-13; Mayor of Boston, 1823-28; President of Harvard College, 1829-45.

King's Chapel, corner of School and Tremont Streets, built of wood in 1688, rebuilt of stone in 1749-54, is a massive building, the walls constructed of Quincy granite. The portico was built in 1789 from funds partly raised by an oratorio in the chapel, at which General Washington attended "attired in a black velvet suit, and gave five guineas." The organ was purchased in England in 1756. The chapel has marble busts of its former pastors, Freeman, Greenwood, Peabody and Foote, and mural monuments of Apthorp, Appleton, Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Joseph May; a marble tablet in memory of General Stevenson, Col. Revere and twelve other members of the parish, who died in the army in 1861-65. The chevalier de Saint Sauveur remains placed in a tomb September, 1778.

In 1688, Sir Edmund Andros seized a part of the burying ground to erect the chapel. In 1710 it was enlarged. Under the chapel are a number of tombs in which are interred a large number of remains of former members of the society.

The commodious Cold Storage facilities for the care and preservation of Furs and Clothing enable A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, to absolutely insure you against loss or deterioration. Because this is the season when their Fur Experts are least busy, extra low prices will be charged for Remodeling Furs.

Though carrying the choicest as well as the largest stock of fine books in New England, nowhere can lower prices on the same books be secured than at Charles E. Lauriat Co.'s new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. They buy only at first hand, in largest quantities, getting every concession that goes with cash buying, and the customers get the benefit.

The E. T. Slattery Company's importations for the spring season are attracting widespread attention. Their collection of suits, coats, costumes, millinery and French novelties have never been surpassed.

Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street haberdasher, is displaying some attractive novelties in soft shirts, fancy waistcoats, neckwear and hosiery for the coming season. He believes in the early showing of these goods and is always one of the first to show novelties.

The Hall & Hancock Co., at 420 Washington Street, are exhibiting their spring fashions in men's hats. The special hat they are selling for $3.50 is the best in workmanship, quality and style that can be produced for the money.

A very attractive shop to visit this Easter season is Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, her lines are all specialties. Gloves, shirt waists, jewelry, veiling, neckwear and belts. Her gloves are made in Europe in the latest styles and colors, the lingerie and tailored waists are perfect in shape and style, and the veils, neckwear and belts are always the correct things.

Different from everything else. Every article in this shop bears the earmarks of oddity, quaintness and beauty, and is the product of Russian peasant handicraft. Artistic brass and copper ware in infinite variety can be found at the Russian Importing Company's, 429 Boylston Street.

The Paris model gowns for afternoon and calling use and the smart English walking suits shown by L. P. Hollander & Co., on Boylston Street, are liberally selected these days by some of the best dressed ladies of Boston and New England for their spring costumes.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, are showing their spring overcoats. It is worth while to examine the stock both for men and boys.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

Henry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard," begins his engagement at the Majestic this week, and the new and serious play of American life, "The Girl in White," comes to the Tremont. Fay Templeton in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," returns to the Colonial, and Robert Edeson in "Strongheart," comes back to the Park. The Castle Square offers "Olivia, or the Vicar of Wakefield," and the Boston Theatre has for an attraction the musical show, "Coming Thro' the Rye," which was first seen at another theatre earlier in the present season, with that versatile comedienne, Stella Mayhew, in the principal part. "In Old Kentucky," makes its annual return to the Globe, and there is a brand new melodrama, entitled "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," at the Grand Opera House. Gillette's "Clarice," at the Hollis is the only attraction remaining over from last week. There are fine vaudeville programmes at the Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard. Attractive burlesque occupies the boards of the Lyceum, Columbia and Palace.

At last Boston is to have an opportunity to see the most delightful college play yet given to the American stage. Henry Woodruff comes to the Majestic Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Monday evening, giving as usual the matinees on Thursday and Saturday during his stay here. "Brown of Harvard" is beyond question one of the most popular college plays yet produced in America. It is full of the sunshine of youth, and its clean, wholesome story is bright in the extreme. Its dainty love interest is of just such a sort as to prove entirely pleasing. There is no problem attached to it, nor yet is it of the milk-and-water order. It is dainty but virile, pretty but true to the ideals of manhood held by all alike. Henry Woodruff is a typical college man and is supported by a company beyond reproach.

King's Chapel, corner of School and Tremont Streets, built of wood in 1688, rebuilt of stone in 1749-54, is a massive building, the walls constructed of Quincy granite. The portico was built in 1789 from funds partly raised by an oratorio in the chapel, at which General Washington attended "attired in a black velvet suit, and gave five guineas." The organ was purchased in England in 1756. The chapel has marble busts of its former pastors, Freeman, Greenwood, Peabody and Foote, and mural monuments of Apthorp, Appleton, Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Joseph May; a marble tablet in memory of General Stevenson, Col. Revere and twelve other members of the parish, who died in the army in 1861-65. The chevalier de Saint Sauveur remains placed in a tomb September, 1778.

Straws tell which way the wind blows and there are lots of straws in the Spring suits to tell which are the chic creations of this year. L. P. Hollander & Co. are showing a taffeta in golden brown having an untrimmed panel of pleats in front, and bands of several widths run from the waist-line and around the skirt to give the double skirt effect. This suit shows other new features. The cape sleeves over full under-sleeves—braiding of the same color in elaborate patterns—a decided hit this Spring—and an elongated center to the back of the jacket—closely resembling the cape de visites of our grandmother's day. It is a very picturesque model.

The commodious Cold Storage facilities for the care and preservation of Furs and Clothing enable A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, to absolutely insure you against loss or deterioration. Because this is the season when their Fur Experts are least busy, extra low prices will be charged for Remodeling Furs.

Though carrying the choicest as well as the largest stock of fine books in New England, nowhere can lower prices on the same books be secured than at Charles E. Lauriat Co.'s new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. They buy only at first hand, in largest quantities, getting every concession that goes with cash buying, and the customers get the benefit.

The E. T. Slattery Company's importations for the spring season are attracting widespread attention. Their collection of suits, coats, costumes, millinery and French novelties have never been surpassed.

Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street haberdasher, is displaying some attractive novelties in soft shirts, fancy waistcoats, neckwear and hosiery for the coming season. He believes in the early showing of these goods and is always one of the first to show novelties.

The Hall & Hancock Co., at 420 Washington Street, are exhibiting their spring fashions in men's hats. The special hat they are selling for $3.50 is the best in workmanship, quality and style that can be produced for the money.

A very attractive shop to visit this Easter season is Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, her lines are all specialties. Gloves, shirt waists, jewelry, veiling, neckwear and belts. Her gloves are made in Europe in the latest styles and colors, the lingerie and tailored waists are perfect in shape and style, and the veils, neckwear and belts are always the correct things.

Different from everything else. Every article in this shop bears the earmarks of oddity, quaintness and beauty, and is the product of Russian peasant handicraft. Artistic brass and copper ware in infinite variety can be found at the Russian Importing Company's, 429 Boylston Street.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

Ellen Terry reappears in this city after an absence of some years bringing with her to the Hollis Street this week an English company, and acts for the first time here the part of Lady Cicely Waynflete in Shaw's farce, "Captain Brassbound's Conversion." At the Globe, George Sidney presents "Busy Izzy's Vacation," a musical show, and at the Grand Opera House, "Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West," is the attraction. The Castle Square offers Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." These attractions are the continuances: Henry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard," at the Majestic; Robert Edeson in "Strongheart," at the Park; Fay Templeton in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," at the Colonial; "The Girl in White," at the Tremont, and "Coming Thro' the Rye," at the Boston. The Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard provide splendid vaudeville, while at the Palace, Lyceum and Columbia there is burlesque of high order. Special matinees are the rule for Patriot's Day, Friday.

Old South Meeting House—Washington and Milk streets. Built 1729 to replace wooden church which had stood on this site. Gov. John Winthrop's home, since 1669. Here many town meetings were held in massacre and tea tax times. Used by British as a riding school, 1775. Use as church abandoned 1872. Revolutionary relics. 9 to 6. Fee 25 cents.

The Boston Public Library in Copley Square is one of the foremost architectural monuments of America, costing $2,500,000. The architects were McKim, Mead & White; the sculptures by Augustus St. Gaudens and D. C. French. The mural paintings by Puvis de Chavannes, Edwin A. Abbey and John S. Sargent attract thousands of visitors to this beautiful structure, which contains 900,000 volumes.

The collections of the Museum of Fine Arts are among the first in the world, and illustrate the art of Egypt, Greece, Rome, the Orient and modern Europe and America. The galleries contain paintings, sculpture, textiles, ceramics, iron and wood work, prints, together with examples of precious objects. There are also numerous reproductions and an art library.

The Town Pump stood at the northeast corner of Washington and State Streets. On the northwest corner was the first store for the sale of merchandise in Boston, kept by John Coggan.

Captain Robert Keayne, the first commander of the Artillery Company known as the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, lived on the southeast corner of State and Washington Streets.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have just added to the other attractions of the "book parlor" of their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street, the contents of another shipment of books from some of their London binders. They are now receiving these shipments of new and old books from abroad practically every fortnight, and some new things in the way of literary oddities may be seen at almost every visit one makes.

The Cold Storage Rooms of A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, are the most modern and scientifically constructed for the storage of Furs, Fur Garments, Rugs and Clothing. Their charges are reasonable. Furs and Clothing called for, cleaned, and put in perfect condition before being stored.

Straws tell which way the wind blows and there are lots of straws in the Spring suits to tell which are the chic creations of this year. L. P. Hollander & Co. are showing a taffeta in golden brown having an untrimmed panel of pleats in front, and bands of several widths run from the waist-line and around the skirt to give the double skirt effect. This suit shows other new features. The cape sleeves over full under-sleeves—braiding of the same color in elaborate patterns—a decided hit this Spring—and an elongated center to the back of the jacket—closely resembling the cape de visites of our grandmother's day. It is a very picturesque model.

The Smith Patterson Co., at 52 Summer Street, are showing a very exclusive line of hall clocks ranging in price from $100 upwards, also a superior line of watches from the more moderate prices up to the most expensive watches made. All goods purchased from this firm will be found thoroughly reliable.

The E. T. Slattery Company's importations for the spring season are attracting widespread attention. Their collection of suits, coats, costumes, millinery and French novelties have never been surpassed.

Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street haberdasher, is displaying some attractive novelties in soft shirts, fancy waistcoats, neckwear and hosiery for the coming season. He believes in the early showing of these goods and is always one of the first to show novelties.

The Hall & Hancock Co., at 420 Washington Street, are exhibiting their spring fashions in men's hats. The special hat they are selling for $3.50 is the best in workmanship, quality and style that can be produced for the money.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

At the Colonial this week Richard Carle begins his engagement in "The Spring Chicken," and Nance O'Neil comes to the Park with "Cleo." Ellen Terry presents at the Hollis, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights, the double bill—"The Good Hope," and "Nance Oldfield," and on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday matinee, "Captain Brassbound's Conversion." The Globe offers Fiske O'Hara in "Mr. Blaney from Ireland," and James K. Hackett returns to the Tremont with "The Walls of Jericho." "Bob" Fitzsimmons appears at the Grand Opera House in a play especially written for him, entitled "A Fight for Love." For the final play of the current season at the Castle Square there is another classic revival, Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." Attractions remaining over are "Brown of Harvard" at the Majestic, and "Coming Thro' the Rye," at the Boston. Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard have fine vaudeville and the burlesque at the Columbia, Palace and Lyceum is entertaining.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet square inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

New Old South Church, Dartmouth Street and Copley Square. Built 1872-75 of Roxbury stone. The great bell tower is 248 feet high. Cost $600,000. The leading Congregational church in New England. Adjoining the church on Boylston Street is the chapel and parsonage. This society formerly occupied the Old South Church.

The Boston Public Library in Copley Square is one of the foremost architectural monuments of America, costing $2,500,000. The architects were McKim, Mead & White; the sculptures by Augustus St. Gaudens and D. C. French. The mural paintings by Puvis de Chavannes, Edwin A. Abbey and John S. Sargent attract thousands of visitors to this beautiful structure, which contains 900,000 volumes.

The collections of the Museum of Fine Arts are among the first in the world, and illustrate the art of Egypt, Greece, Rome, the Orient and modern Europe and America. The galleries contain paintings, sculpture, textiles, ceramics, iron and wood work, prints, together with examples of precious objects. There are also numerous reproductions and an art library.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. have just added to the other attractions of the "book parlor" of their new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street, the contents of another shipment of books from some of their London binders. They are now receiving these shipments of new and old books from abroad practically every fortnight, and some new things in the way of literary oddities may be seen at almost every visit one makes.

The Cold Storage Rooms of A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, are the most modern and scientifically constructed for the storage of Furs, Fur Garments, Rugs and Clothing. Their charges are reasonable. Furs and Clothing called for, cleaned, and put in perfect condition before being stored.

Straws tell which way the wind blows and there are lots of straws in the Spring suits to tell which are the chic creations of this year. L. P. Hollander & Co. are showing a taffeta in golden brown having an untrimmed panel of pleats in front, and bands of several widths run from the waist-line and around the skirt to give the double skirt effect. This suit shows other new features. The cape sleeves over full under-sleeves—braiding of the same color in elaborate patterns—a decided hit this Spring—and an elongated center to the back of the jacket—closely resembling the cape de visites of our grandmother's day. It is a very picturesque model.

The Smith Patterson Co., at 52 Summer Street, are showing a very exclusive line of hall clocks ranging in price from $100 upwards, also a superior line of watches from the more moderate prices up to the most expensive watches made. All goods purchased from this firm will be found thoroughly reliable.

The E. T. Slattery Company's importations for the spring season are attracting widespread attention. Their collection of suits, coats, costumes, millinery and French novelties have never been surpassed.

Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street haberdasher, is displaying some attractive novelties in soft shirts, fancy waistcoats, neckwear and hosiery for the coming season. He believes in the early showing of these goods and is always one of the first to show novelties.

The Hall & Hancock Co., at 420 Washington Street, are exhibiting their spring fashions in men's hats. The special hat they are selling for $3.50 is the best in workmanship, quality and style that can be produced for the money.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

This week marks the beginning of the spring and summer season of light opera and operetta at the Castle Square, the initial piece being De Koven's operetta, "Robin Hood." John Craig and his stock company open a spring and summer season at the Globe with a revival of "The Heart of Maryland." At the Majestic for the first times in Boston, Virginia Harned presents "The Great Question," and the Hollis Street once more offers "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland." The Grand Opera House offers "Billy the Kid," a melodrama with Joseph Santley in the leading part. The attractions remaining over are: Nance O'Neil in "Cleo," at the Park; James K. Hackett in "The Walls of Jericho," at the Tremont; Richard Carle in "The Spring Chicken," at the Colonial, and "Coming Thro' the Rye," at the Boston. Fine vaudeville programmes are given at Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard. Burlesque of merit shows at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

Virginia Harned comes to the Majestic Theatre on Monday to impersonate the second of Tolstoi's heroines to be seen on the stage. Anna Karenina will provide a striking contrast to Katusha Maslova, the central figue in "Ressurrection," whose interpretation by Blanche Walsh will be remembered as a painful study in vice. Pathos is not lacking, of course, in Anna Karenina, but the character is one which does not fail to win sympathy. The play in which Miss Harned will be seen is entitled "The Great Question," and the version is said to be an exact translation of the French adaptation from Tolstoi's famous novel. The French version has proved one of the most striking successes of the season in Paris. The death of Anna is to be depicted in a striking manner by a device which will present realism shorn of its horrors.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet square inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

New Old South Church, Dartmouth Street and Copley Square. Built 1872-75 of Roxbury stone. The great bell tower is 248 feet high. Cost $600,000. The leading Congregational church in New England. Adjoining the church on Boylston Street is the chapel and parsonage. This society formerly occupied the Old South Church.

The Russian Importing Co., at 429 Boylston Street, are showing a complete line of odd and unique articles made by the Russian peasant. Samovars, their latest importation are worth inspection together with their handwrought copper and brass, modern and antique silverware, table linens, drawn work and embroideries.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

The Cold Storage Rooms of A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, are the most modern and scientifically constructed for the storage of Furs, Fur Garments, Rugs and Clothing. Their charges are reasonable. Furs and Clothing called for, cleaned, and put in perfect condition before being stored.

Few things make better presents at any season of the year—for a birthday or a wedding for instance—than well selected books. Nowhere in New England can one find a choicer gathering of them, in elegant bindings or greater range in price than at Charles E. Lauriat Co.'s new store, opposite the head of Franklin Street. There is a pleasure in selecting amid such surroundings.

The toilet parlors of Dr. Rudolph Mertin at 564 Washington Street, opposite the Adams House, are the largest in New England, employing thirty-five expert operators. The hair dressing department makes a specialty of marcel waving and carries a first-class line of hair goods and toilet articles. Dr. Mertin's reputation as a chiropodist is well known.

Some of the most striking and desirable novelties in men's waist coats are shown by Josiah T. Dyer the Haberdasher, on Boylston Street.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages.

Beyond dispute the florist par excellence of Boston is Thomas F. Galvin. We were well repaid a visit made to his Tremont Street and Back Bay stores by a sight of a great display of rare orchids and various hued chrysanthemums, American beauty roses, English and Russian violets. The business done is remarkable.

Miss M. F. Fisk, 144 Tremont Street, announces the continuance for another week of her Removal Clearance Sale, her customers have been delighted with the opportunity afforded them so early in the season to secure up-to-date gloves, lingerie and tailored waists, feather collars, lace ruffs, embroidered collars and belts, jewelry, etc., at a discount from regular prices.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

A new musical play from Chicago entitled "The Time, the Place and the Girl," comes to the Tremont this week, and Arthur Deagon and Georgie Drew Mendum have the principal parts. The Grand Opera House offers a new and striking melodrama, "For a Human Life," and the John Craig Co. at the Globe in "The Heart of Maryland." Various attractions remaining over are Virginia Harned in "The Great Question," at the Majestic; "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland," at the Hollis; Richard Carle in "The Spring Chicken," at the Colonial, and "Robin Hood," at the Castle Square. Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard have fine vaudeville, and the burlesque shows at the Palace, Lyceum and Columbia are amusing.

The San Carlo Opera Company, headed by Alice Nielsen, plays at the Park Theatre, in the following repertoire: Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday nights, "La Boheme;" Wednesday night and Saturday matinee, "Don Pasquale," and Thursday night, the Garden Scene from "Faust," and the last two acts of Il Trovotore.

Public Library, Copley Square. Founded 1852; is the largest library in America, and has over 550,000 volumes and 350,000 pamphlets. Erected in 1888-95 at a cost of $2,650,000. Most of the land was given by the state. The building is built of pinkish-gray granite. The building is two hundred and twenty-five feet long, two hundred and twenty-seven feet deep and seventy feet high. Joshua Bates, a native of Boston, but long a resident of London, England, gave $100,000 for the purchase of books, and since that time many generous individuals have given their large private libraries, and donated large sums of money for the use of the library. The city makes a large annual appropriation for the support of the library. (The old school building on Mason Street was the first building used for the library, and in 1858 a large new building was completed on Boylston Street. It was torn down in 1899.) The beautiful halls contain, beside the large number of books, many rare works of art, statues of bronze and marble, oil paintings, marble busts and many valuable historic relics of the city.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet square inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

The Majestic this week presents for the first time here Rachel Crother's play, "The Three of Us," and at the Hollis Street Olga Nethersole appears in the following repertoire: Monday evening, "Adrienne Lecouvreur;" Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, "Sapho;" Wednesday matinee, "Camille;" Wednesday evening, "Carmen;" Thursday evening, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." John Craig and his Company at the Globe offer "Old Heidelberg," while the Grand Opera House closes its season with "The Two Orphans." Gilbert and Sullivan's favorite operetta, "The Gondoliers," is sung at the Castle Square. The continuances are Richard Carle in "The Spring Chicken," at the Colonial, and "The Time, the Place and the Girl," at the Tremont. San Carlo Opera Co., headed by Alice Nielsen, plays at the park Theatre, in the following repertoire: Monday night, "La Boheme;" Tuesday night, The Garden Scene from "Faust," and the last two acts of "Il Trovatore;" Wednesday matinee, "La Boheme;" Wednesday night, scenes from the "Barber of Seville," "La Traviata" and "Rigoletto." Attractive vaudeville features make up the bills at Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard. There are good burlesque shows at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

Public Library, Copley Square. Founded 1852; is the largest library in America, and has over 550,000 volumes and 350,000 pamphlets. Erected in 1888-95 at a cost of $2,650,000. Most of the land was given by the state. The building is built of pinkish-gray granite. The building is two hundred and twenty-five feet long, two hundred and twenty-seven feet deep and seventy feet high. Joshua Bates, a native of Boston, but long a resident of London, England, gave $100,000 for the purchase of books, and since that time many generous individuals have given their large private libraries, and donated large sums of money for the use of the library. The city makes a large annual appropriation for the support of the library. (The old school building on Mason Street was the first building used for the library, and in 1858 a large new building was completed on Boylston Street. It was torn down in 1899.) The beautiful halls contain, beside the large number of books, many rare works of art, statues of bronze and marble, oil paintings, marble busts and many valuable historic relics of the city.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet square inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

Several extensive private libraries, recently purchased, have been opened up and displayed by Charles E. Lauriat Co. in their "old book salesroom" in the basement of their new store, 385 Washington St., opposite the head of Franklin St., where they are attracting a good deal of attention. The buying of entire private libraries—no matter how large—is an important part of the company's business.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages.

Hats that are made with the idea in view that they shall look as well at the end of the season, barring accidents, as they do at the beginning are unusual. People who wear them will tell you they were bought at the Hall and Hancock Co., 420 Washington Street.

In addition to many exclusive novelties in shirts at Dyer's, the Boylston Street Haberdasher, attention is asked to a line of very fine Scotch Madras Cloths, made expressly for them.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, make a special feature in their Boys' Clothing Department of garments for little boys. Attention is now called to the sailor and Russian blouse, wash and woolen suits. Mothers who accompany their boys are invited to visit the Ladies' Tailoring Parlor adjoining the Boys' Department.

Miss M. F. Fisk, 144 Tremont Street, announces the continuance for another week of her Removal Clearance Sale, her customers have been delighted with the opportunity afforded them so early in the season to secure up-to-date gloves, lingerie and tailored waists, feather collars, lace ruffs, embroidered collars and belts, jewelry, etc., at a discount from regular prices.

The Russian Importing Co., at 429 Boylston Street, are showing a complete line of odd and unique articles made by the Russian peasant. Samovars, their latest importation are worth inspection together with their handwrought copper and brass, modern and antique silverware, table linens, drawn work and embroideries.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

The Cold Storage Rooms of A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, are the most modern and scientifically constructed for the storage of Furs, Fur Garments, Rugs and Clothing. Their charges are reasonable. Furs and Clothing called for, cleaned, and put in perfect condition before being stored.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

This week at the Hollis Street, Cyril Scott for the first time in this city presents "The Prince Chap," and at the Castle Square, Alfred Cellier's light operetta, "Dorothy," is the offering. The John Craig Stock Company at the Globe plays "The Great Match," which is the initial presentation at popular prices. Continuances are: "The Three of Us," at the Majestic; the Lillian Lawrence Stock Company in "Frou Frou," at the Park; "The Time, the Place and the Girl," at the Tremont, and Richard Carle in "The Spring Chicken," at the Colonial. Excellent vaudeville is given at the Orpheum, Keith's and the Howard. Burlesque that pleases comes to the Lyceum, the Columbia and the Palace.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Mr. Isaac Johnson, 1630; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle of Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The equestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

Several extensive private libraries, recently purchased, have been opened up and displayed by Charles E. Lauriat Co. in their "old book salesroom" in the basement of their new store, 385 Washington St., opposite the head of Franklin St., where they are attracting a good deal of attention. The buying of entire private libraries—no matter how large—is an important part of the company's business.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages.

Hats that are made with the idea in view that they shall look as well at the end of the season, barring accidents, as they do at the beginning are unusual. People who wear them will tell you they were bought at the Hall and Hancock Co., 420 Washington Street.

In addition to many exclusive novelties in shirts at Dyer's, the Boylston Street Haberdasher, attention is asked to a line of very fine Scotch Madras Cloths, made expressly for them.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, make a special feature in their Boys' Clothing Department of garments for little boys. Attention is now called to the sailor and Russian blouse, wash and woolen suits. Mothers who accompany their boys are invited to visit the Ladies' Tailoring Parlor adjoining the Boys' Department.

Miss M. F. Fisk, 144 Tremont Street, announces the continuance for another week of her Removal Clearance Sale, her customers have been delighted with the opportunity afforded them so early in the season to secure up-to-date gloves, lingerie and tailored waists, feather collars, lace ruffs, embroidered collars and belts, jewelry, etc., at a discount from regular prices.

The Russian Importing Co., at 429 Boylston Street, are showing a complete line of odd and unique articles made by the Russian peasant. Samovars, their latest importation are worth inspection together with their handwrought copper and brass, modern and antique silverware, table linens, drawn work and embroideries.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

The Cold Storage Rooms of A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, are the most modern and scientifically constructed for the storage of Furs, Fur Garments, Rugs and Clothing. Their charges are reasonable. Furs and Clothing called for, cleaned, and put in perfect condition before being stored.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

At the Majestic this week, Augusta Thomas's comedy of American urban life, "The Other Girl," is presented with Thomas Ross in the leading part. "In the Bishop's Carriage," is the offering of the Lillian Lawrence Stock Company at the Park, and for the first time at popular prices "The Darling of the Gods," is played at the Globe by the John Craig Stock Company. Gilbert and Sullivan's opera "Patience," is given at the Castle Square. Attractions remaining over are "The Time, the Place and the Girl," at the Tremont; and Cyril Scott in "The Prince Chap," at the Hollis Street. Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard present fine vaudeville. Burlesque of amusing character is given at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Mr. Isaac Johnson, 1630; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle of Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The esquestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

The commodious Cold Storage facilities for the care and preservation of Furs and Clothing enable A. N. Cook & Co., at 161 Tremont Street, to absolutely insure you against loss or deterioration. THINGS WORTH SEEING

At the Majestic this week, Augusta Thomas's comedy of American urban life, "The Other Girl," is presented with Thomas Ross in the leading part. "In the Bishop's Carriage," is the offering of the Lillian Lawrence Stock Company at the Park, and for the first time at popular prices "The Darling of the Gods," is played at the Globe by the John Craig Stock Company. Gilbert and Sullivan's opera "Patience," is given at the Castle Square. Attractions remaining over are "The Time, the Place and the Girl," at the Tremont; and Cyril Scott in "The Prince Chap," at the Hollis Street. Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard present fine vaudeville. Burlesque of amusing character is given at the Columbia, Lyceum and Palace.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Mr. Isaac Johnson, 1630; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle of Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The esquestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a line of golf stockings in the new and fashionable shades.

Different from everything else. Every article in this shop bears the earmarks of oddity, quaintness and beauty, and is the product of Russian peasant handicraft. Artistic brass and copper ware in infinite variety can be found at the Russian Importing Company's, 429 Boylston Street.

The E. T. Slattery Company, 155 Tremont Street, anticipating the wants for graduating and class days, and for summer wear in general, have provided many exquisite and choice designs in lingerie and net gowns, and dainty waists; suits and coats in linen, pongee and fancy weaves for every occasion. Gloves are shown in the standard makes, all lengths and prices, also the latest novelties in French jewelry and neckwear.

Those who are considering the issuing of invitations to weddings, receptions, teas, or any social affairs, should possess themselves of the dainty little volume, "Wedding and Social Stationery," issued by Smith, Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street. The Art, Stationery and Engraving Department in this store has increased wonderfully with additional facilities, and customers may be certain that all engraving orders sent out with the stamp of this firm upon it will be correct and fine in every detail.

Blanchard, King & Co., 250 Boylston Street, are showing a choice line of Scotch Madrasses of their exclusive importation in their custom shirt department.

A very attractive shop to visit this season is Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, her lines are all specialties. Gloves, shirt waists, jewelry, veiling, neckwear and belts. Her gloves are made in Europe in the latest styles and colors, the lingerie and tailored waists are perfect in shape and style, and the veils, neckwear and belts are always the correct things.

Straw hat time is here, and the men who wish to be right in the matter of looks as well as comfort will be glad to know that the complete summer showing of straw hats is now on view at Hall & Hancock's, 420 Washington Street.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, are showing an elegant line of summer clothing and haberdashery for both men and boys.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co., at 30-38 Summer Street, have just received a large importation of Oriental rugs. Their stock is the largest in this city and comprises the following makes: Kermanshahs, Khorassans, Savalans, Indias, Khivas, Cashmeres, Gheordes, Moussouls, Ganges, Kazaks, Daghestans, Shirvans, Carabagh and Hamidan rugs.

Charles E. Lauriat Company have a Brookline private library on sale in the front of their store, opposite the head of Franklin Street, that is attracting more than ordinary attention. It is the collection of an old time resident, recently deceased, whose hobby was historical literature, although there is also a fine showing of standard books in the lot. It is well worth while stepping in to look it over.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

At the Park the Lillian Lawrence Stock Company presents for the first time in Boston this week, "The Little Gray Lady," at the Castle Square the offering is Gounod's grand opera, "Faust." Attractions coming over from last week are David Warfield in "The Music Master," at the Majestic; "The Time, the Place and the Girl," at the Colonial, and "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl," at the Tremont. "The Girl I Left Behind Me," by the John Craig Stock Company, is the attraction at the Globe. Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard present excellent vaudeville. The burlesque shows at the Columbia, the Lyceum and the Palace are of pleasing character.

Symphony Hall, corner of Massachusetts and Huntington Avenues, was built in 1899 and 1900. The main entrance on Huntington Avenue has an Ionic portico with eight stone pillars, and the walls of the building are of stone and brick. The main hall rises higher than the rest of the building, with a pediment at the top. At either corner of the front section is a pavilion which runs into a wing extending the length of the building. Overlooking these wings in the main hall are clere windows. On the Massachusetts Avenue side is a vestibule which makes a straight line through and across the hall interior. The building has a frontage of one hundred and fifty feet on Huntington Avenue. The total seating capacity of the hall is 2,630, two hundred and thirty-three more than the old Music Hall. The floor capacity is 1,511, the first balcony six hundred and eight and second balcony five hundred and eleven. The hall has an interior length of one hundred and forty feet and a width of seventy-five feet. The main ticket office is on the Massachusetts Avenue side. The building cost about $500,000.

The Emancipation Group, Park Square, is a duplicate of the Freedman's Memorial in Washington, made of bronze and represents Lincoln with a freed negro kneeling at his feet. Cost $17,000.

Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Washington Street, corner Malden Street. Dedicated May 2, 1875. The largest church in New England; built of stone in 1867-75. The dimensions are three hundred and sixty-four by one hundred and seventy feet. The chapel of the Blessed Sacrament has the altar from the Franklin Street Cathedral. In the rear of the cathedral is the archbishop's residence.

Park Street Church, corner of Park and Tremont Streets, dedicated May 1, 1809; a prominent landmark. The basement was formerly a crypt and had about thirty-five tombs. The remains were removed to other burying grounds and the tombs removed some years ago. Later the basement was used as a schoolroom.

There is no possible way to See and Learn as much, at any price, as with F. A. Waterman, the Boston Guide. Parties leave at 9.30 and 2.30. Front of Park Street Church, Boston. See page 2.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a line of golf stockings in the new and fashionable shades.

Different from everything else. Every article in this shop bears the earmarks of oddity, quaintness and beauty, and is the product of Russian peasant handicraft. Artistic brass and copper ware in infinite variety can be found at the Russian Importing Company's, 429 Boylston Street.

The E. T. Slattery Company, 155 Tremont Street, anticipating the wants for graduating and class days, and for summer wear in general, have provided many exquisite and choice designs in lingerie and net gowns, and dainty waists; suits and coats in linen, pongee and fancy weaves for every occasion. Gloves are shown in the standard makes, all lengths and prices, also the latest novelties in French jewelry and neckwear.

Those who are considering the issuing of invitations to weddings, receptions, teas, or any social affairs, should possess themselves of the dainty little volume, "Wedding and Social Stationery," issued by Smith, Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street. The Art, Stationery and Engraving Department in this store has increased wonderfully with additional facilities, and customers may be certain that all engraving orders sent out with the stamp of this firm upon it will be correct and fine in every detail.

Blanchard, King & Co., 250 Boylston Street, are showing a choice line of Scotch Madrasses of their exclusive importation in their custom shirt department.

A very attractive shop to visit this season is Miss Fisk's, 144 Tremont Street, her lines are all specialties. Gloves, shirt waists, jewelry, veiling, neckwear and belts. Her gloves are made in Europe in the latest styles and colors, the lingerie and tailored waists are perfect in shape and style, and the veils, neckwear and belts are always the correct things.

Straw hat time is here, and the men who wish to be right in the matter of looks as well as comfort will be glad to know that the complete summer showing of straw hats is now on view at Hall & Hancock's, 420 Washington Street.

The Macullar Parker Company, at 400 Washington Street, are showing an elegant line of summer clothing and haberdashery for both men and boys.

Charles E. Lauriat Company have a Brookline private library on sale in the front of their store, opposite the head of Franklin Street, that is attracting more than ordinary attention. It is the collection of an old time resident, recently deceased, whose hobby was historical literature, although there is also a fine showing of standard books in the lot. It is well worth while stepping in to look it over.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

Everything in the summer amusement line is running full blast and pleasure seekers have a wide variety of entertainments to choose from.

Paragon Park has opened for its third season with many new features, and "Wonderland," Boston's million dollar pleasure park at Revere Beach, is a revelation to Boston and New England people. The Museum of Fine Arts in Copley Square will open free, Monday, June 17, from 9 until 5.

George M. Cohan's "50 Miles from Boston," opens an engagement at the Colonial this week, and Lillian Lawrence and her Company play "On Parole," for the first time in Boston, at the Park. Gilbert and Sullivan's popular opera, "The Mikado," is the offering at the Castle Square. The John Craig Stock Company at the Globe presents "The Conquerors." Two attractions that remain over are David Warfield in "The Music Master," at the Majestic and "The Hurdy, Gurdy Girl," at the Tremont. Vaudeville that is pleasing is shown at Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard. The Lyceum and the Palace present amusing burlesque.

Bunker Hill Monument. A granite obelisk, 221 feet high, on Monument Square, Breeds Hill, Charlestown. Corner stone laid by Lafayette, June 17, 1825, and monument dedicated, June 17, 1843; Daniel Webster delivered the oration. Cost $150,000. The battle of Bunker Hill was fought, June 17, 1775, when 4,000 British veterans attacked 3,000 Americans behind rude breastworks, and after four hours' battle, captured the redoubt. The British lost 1,500; the Americans 450.

A marble statue of Gen. Warren, who was slain at Bunker Hill, stands in the lodge at the base of the monument. Erected 1857.

A bronze statue of Col. William Prescott also stands on the grounds. Erected 1881.

The town was burnt by the British, June 17, 1775, during the battle, and the 2,700 inhabitants were forced to flee to towns adjoining. Loss $500,000.

United States Navy Yard. Founded 1800; entrance on Water Street. The yard is between the Charles and Mystic Rivers, and has an area of eighty-seven and a quarter acres; surrounded by a high granite wall and a water front of one and one-half miles. There are seventy-five buildings in the enclosure; commandant's residence, naval museum, naval institute, machine shops and a rope walk, built of granite, 1,361 feet long, where rope is made for the U. S. navy. The great granite dry dock is three hundred and seventy feet long; built 1827-33, at a cost of $994,000. The receiving ship Wabash is moored off the yard, with other vessels.

SHOPPING NEWS

Charles E. Lauriat Co. are now closing out the balance of several important private libraries recently purchased, and which have been attracting crowds to their handsome store, opposite Franklin St., during the past two weeks. Mr. Lauriat's European purchases are commencing to come in and room for them must be made.

No visit to Boston is complete unless it includes a visit to the London Harness Company, located in the John Hancock Building, 176 Devonshire St. This firm makes and imports leather goods and travelling requisites from England and their store is one of the sights of the hub.

Blanchard King & Co., 250 Boylston St. are offering the balance of their line of imported hand embroidered waist and suit patterns at 25% discount.

Miss M. F. Fisk, 114 Tremont Street, is a very interesting place in which to shop; the gloves, veilings, waists and belts bear the hall mark of the best foreign and American houses.

A very striking and beautiful display of dress wear for men is being made by Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street Haberdasher.

A man wears his hat in a more conspicuous place than any other article of apparel. This fact is taken into consideration when Hall & Hancock hats are made, and especial care is taken that they shall be absolutely correct in style. The address is 420 Washington Street.

Those who are considering the issuing of invitations to weddings, receptions, teas, or any social affairs, should possess themselves of the dainty little volume, "Wedding and Social Stationery," issued by Smith, Patterson Company, at 52 Summer Street. The Art, Stationery and Engraving Department in this store has increased wonderfully with additional facilities, and customers may be certain that all engraving orders sent out with the stamp of this firm upon it will be correct and fine in every detail.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a line of steamer rugs in all the up-to-date fabrics and colorings.

For that Tired Feeling which accompanies Spring shopping, get a glass of Coca-Cola at the nearest soda fountain.

The E. T. Slattery Company, 155 Tremont Street, anticipating the wants for graduating and class days, and for summer wear in general, have provided many exquisite and choice designs in lingerie and net gowns, and dainty waists; suits and coats in linen, pongee and fancy weaves for every occasion. Gloves are shown in the standard makes, all lengths and prices, also the latest novelties in French jewelry and neckwear.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

There are but three changes at the regular theatres of the city this week, these being the Globe, where the John Craig Stock Company presents "The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown," the Castle Square with the opera company playing "Lucia di Lammermoor," and the Park theatre where Lillian Lawrence and her company present Hoyt's "A Milk White Flag." Shows that continue are David Warfield in "The Music Master," at the Majestic: Monday June 24 being the 1000th performance of Warfield in this beautiful play, souve nirs will be presented; "50 Miles from Boston," at the Colonial and "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl," at the Tremont. Keith's has a choice programme of vaudeville. The Howard and the Palace offer amusing summer burlesque and vaudeville combined. At the Majestic Theatre beginning Monday, July 1st for a single week E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will play a farewell engagement as co-stars in Shakesperian Repertoire.

Public Library, Copley Square. Founded 1852, is the largest library in America, and has over 550,000 volumes and 350,000 pamphlets. Erected in 1888-95 at a cost of $2,650,000. Most of the land was given by the state. The building is built of pinkish-gray granite. The building is two hundred and twenty-five feet long, two hundred and twenty-seven feet deep and seventy feet high. Joshua Bates, a native of Boston, but long a resident of London, England, gave $100,000 for the purchase of books, and since that time many generous individuals have given their large private libraries, and donated large sums of money for the use of the library. The city makes a large annual appropriation for the support of the library. (The old school building on Mason Street was the first building used for the library, and in 1858 a large new building was completed on Boylston Street. It was torn down in 1899.) The beautiful halls contain, beside the large number of books, many rare works of art, statues of bronze and marble, oil paintings, marble busts and many valuable historic relics of the city.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet quare inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

Strangers and tourists who wish to see historic Boston the best possible way, visiting all places of historic interest in and around the city, through the quaint streets and lanes to the ancient buildings of the old North End will be able to see and learn the most in the shortest time by going with F. A. Waterman, the recognized Boston Guide. See opposite page for times, etc.

The Russian Importing Company of 429 Boylston Street extends a cordial invitation to guests of Boston to visit their shop, where they exhibit "All handicraft of the Russian Peasant," which consists of Hand Drawn linen, waist patterns, laces, collar and cuffs, old jewelry, silverware, bronzes, brasses and copper. A specialty of this Shop is Hand Carved Woodenware.

"Where to spend the summer" is the question that is now troubling the travelling public. Thomas Cook and Son, 332 Washington Street, Boston, suggest The Berkshires, Bermuda or by making a tour around the world. Very nice suggestions of Cook.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

One of the handsomest conservatories in this country is that of Mr. Thomas F. Galvin on the corner of Boylston and Fairfield streets. It is well worth a visit, not only on account of the architectural beauty of the building but also for the large variety of rare plants with which it is stocked.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. are now closing out the balance of several important private libraries recently purchased, and which have been attracting crowds to their handsome store, opposite Franklin St., during the past two weeks. Mr. Lauriat's European purchases are commencing to come in and room for them must be made.

No visit to Boston is complete unless it includes a visit to the London Harness Company, located in the John Hancock Building, 176 Devonshire St. This firm makes and imports leather goods and travelling requisites from England and their store is one of the sights of the hub.

Blanchard King & Co., 250 Boylston St. are offering the balance of their line of imported hand embroidered waist and suit patterns at 25% discount.

Miss M. F. Fisk, 114 Tremont Street, is a very interesting place in which to shop; the gloves, veilings, waists and belts bear the hall mark of the best foreign and American houses.

L. P. Hollander & Co.'s department for the sale of ribbons, carry a complete stock of plaids, Roman stripes, Dresden effects, moires, peau de cygnes and faille ribbons; also many novelties in narrow ribbons for dress trimmings. They also make up bows and hair ornaments without extra charge.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

Everything in the summer amusement line is running full blast and pleasure seekers have a wide variety of entertainments to choose from.

Paragon Park has opened for its third season with many new features, and "Wonderland," Boston's million dollar pleasure park at Revere Beach, is a revelation to Boston and New England people. The Museum of Fine Arts in Copley Square will open free, Monday, June 17, from 9 until 5.

George M. Cohan's "50 Miles from Boston," opens an engagement at the Colonial this week, and Lillian Lawrence and her Company play "On Parole," for the first time in Boston, at the Park. Gilbert and Sullivan's popular opera, "The Mikado," is the offering at the Castle Square. The John Craig Stock Company at the Globe presents "The Conquerors." Two attractions that remain over are David Warfield in "The Music Master," at the Majestic and "The Hurdy, Gurdy Girl," at the Tremont. Vaudeville that is pleasing is shown at Keith's, the Orpheum and the Howard. The Lyceum and the Palace present amusing burlesque.

Bunker Hill Monument. A granite obelisk, 221 feet high, on Monument Square, Breeds Hill, Charlestown. Corner stone laid by Lafayette, June 17, 1825, and monument dedicated, June 17, 1843; Daniel Webster delivered the oration. Cost $150,000. The battle of Bunker Hill was fought, June 17, 1775, when 4,000 British veterans attacked 3,000 Americans behind rude breastworks, and after four hours' battle, captured the redoubt. The British lost 1,500; the Americans 450.

A marble statue of Gen. Warren, who was slain at Bunker Hill, stands in the lodge at the base of the monument. Erected 1857.

A bronze statue of Col. William Prescott also stands on the grounds. Erected 1881.

The town was burnt by the British, June 17, 1775, during the battle, and the 2,700 inhabitants were forced to flee to towns adjoining. Loss $500,000.

United States Navy Yard. Founded 1800; entrance on Water Street. The yard is between the Charles and Mystic Rivers, and has an area of eighty-seven and a quarter acres; surrounded by a high granite wall and a water front of one and one-half miles. There are seventy-five buildings in the enclosure; commandant's residence, naval museum, naval institute, machine shops and a rope walk, built of granite, 1,361 feet long, where rope is made for the U. S. navy. The great granite dry dock is three hundred and seventy feet long; built 1827-33, at a cost of $994,000. The receiving ship Wabash is moored off the yard, with other vessels.

It is generally acknowledged by all Bostonians who are familiar with the store of the London Harness Company, 176 Devonshire St., that not alone in the furnishings, but in the stock as well it is unique in many ways, all that the fascinating Shop on Regent St., and Piccadilly, London, and the famous Rue de la Paix of Paris can show will be found here. Artistic leather goods, travelling bags, automobile requisites, English silver novelties, in fact unusual things from the art centres of the world which you would never think would be found in a Harness and Saddlery Establishment.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a complete line of Allen, Solly & Co.'s hosiery and underwear.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

The Russian Importing Company of 429 Boylston Street extends a cordial invitation to guests of Boston to visit their shop, where they exhibit "All handicraft of the Russian Peasant," which consists of Hand Drawn linen, waist patterns, laces, collar and cuffs, old jewelry, silverware, bronzes, brasses and copper. A specialty of this Shop is Hand Carved Woodenware.

"Where to spend the summer" is the question that is now troubling the travelling public. Thomas Cook and Son, 332 Washington Street, Boston, suggest The Berkshires, Bermuda or by making a tour around the world. Very nice suggestions of Cook.

Thomas O'Callaghan & Co. are offering a new line of choice antique Oriental rugs. The patrons of this house are cordially invited to pass judgment of their selection.

One of the handsomest conservatories in this country is that of Mr. Thomas F. Galvin on the corner of Boylston and Fairfield streets. It is well worth a visit, not only on account of the architectural beauty of the building but also for the large variety of rare plants with which it is stocked.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Charles E. Lauriat Co. are now closing out the balance of several important private libraries recently purchased, and which have been attracting crowds to their handsome store, opposite Franklin St., during the past two weeks. Mr. Lauriat's European purchases are commencing to come in and room for them must be made.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

The opera company at the Castle Square continues to play to large audiences and this week the offering is "Il Trovatore." Lillian Lawrence, assisted by Charles Miller and a stock company present "The Late Mr. Tompkins," at the Park. "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl," adds another week to its long and successful run at the Tremont. There is a fine vaudeville programme at Keith's and the Palace offers amusing burlesque with vaudeville. At Wonderland and Paragon Park new and startling features are witnessed in the free circus acts. An entertaining vaudeville bill is given at the covered open-air theatre in Norumbega Park and Lexington Park continues to please all who visit there.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Mr. Isaac Johnson, 1630; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle of Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The equestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

Charles E. Lauriat Company's bookstore, opposite the head of Franklin St., is looking unusually enticing these days, as the result of a display of the contents of the preliminary shipments of Mr. Lauriat's purchases abroad this summer. The fine old books in particular are a very attractive lot and many curious, out-of-the-way books appear among them as well as scarce old editions of standard authors. They are well worth the time necessary to look them over.

For something original in summer neckwear Blanchard King Co.'s, 250 Boylston St., is a desirable place to visit.

It is generally acknowledged by all Bostonians who are familiar with the store of the London Harness Company, 176 Devonshire St., that not alone in the furnishings, but in the stock as well it is unique in many ways, all that the fascinating Shop on Regent St., and Piccadilly, London, and the famous Rue de la Paix of Paris can show will be found here. Artistic leather goods, travelling bags, automobile requisites, English silver novelties, in fact unusual things from the art centres of the world which you would never think would be found in a Harness and Saddlery Establishment.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a complete line of Allen, Solly & Co.'s hosiery and underwear.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

The Russian Importing Company of 429 Boylston Street extends a cordial invitation to guests of Boston to visit their shop, where they exhibit "All handicraft of the Russian Peasant," which consists of Hand Drawn linen, waist patterns, laces, collar and cuffs, old jewelry, silverware, bronzes, brasses and copper. A specialty of this Shop is Hand Carved Woodenware.

A very striking and beautiful display of dress wear for men is being made by Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street Haberdasher.

A man wears his hat in a more conspicuous place than any other article of apparel. This fact is taken into consideration when Hall & Hancock hats are made, and especial care is taken that they shall be absolutely correct in style. The address is 420 Washington Street.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the summer.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

THINGS WORTH SEEING

"The Hurdy Gurdy Girl" continues its run at the Tremont Theatre and is gaining in popularity each week, Lillian Lawrence and Charles Miller at the head of their stock company play "Christopher, Jr.," this week at the Park Theatre. The popular grand opera, "Maritana," is the offering at the Castle Square. Keith's presents an excellent summer vaudeville bill, and at the Palace there are burlesque and vaudeville combined.

The features at the summer parks are ever changing. Norumbega and Lexington Parks, reached by fine country rides, have a great deal to amuse their patrons. Wonderland at Revere Beach, and Paragon Park at Nantasket Beach, are at the height of the season, both giving to the public costly free circus acts.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Mr. Isaac Johnson, 1630; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle of Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The equestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

Visitors passing through Boston and in want of something made of leather should not fail to visit the London Harness Company, in the John Hancock Building, 176 Devonshire Street. This Company is one of the best known in Boston for traveling bags, trunks, automobile supplies, and every requisite for the traveller.

A very striking and beautiful display of dress wear for men is being made by Josiah T. Dyer, the Boylston Street Haberdasher.

A man wears his hat in a more conspicuous place than any other article of apparel. This fact is taken into consideration when Hall & Hancock hats are made, and especial care is taken that they shall be absolutely correct in style. The address is 420 Washington Street.

Thos. Cook & Son, 332 Washington Street, near the Old South Church, is a convenient place to get your letter of credit or circular notes cashed and also to obtain information as to ocean passages and the best place to spend the summer.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Charles E. Lauriat Company's bookstore, opposite the head of Franklin St., is looking unusually enticing these days, as the result of a display of the contents of the preliminary shipments of Mr. Lauriat's purchases abroad this summer. The fine old books in particular are a very attractive lot and many curious, out-of-the-way books appear among them as well as scarce old editions of standard authors. They are well worth the time necessary to look them over.

For something original in summer neckwear Blanchard King Co.'s, 250 Boylston St., is a desirable place to visit.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a complete line of Allen, Solly & Co.'s hosiery and underwear.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

The Russian Importing Company of 429 Boylston Street extends a cordial invitation to guests of Boston to visit their shop, where they exhibit "All handicraft of the Russian Peasant," which consists of Hand Drawn linen, waist patterns, laces, collar and cuffs, old jewelry, silverware, bronzes, brasses and copper. A specialty of this Shop is Hand Carved Woodenware.

"Erminie" is the opera sung this week at the Castle Square, and Lillian Lawrence and Charles Miller with their stock company play "As a Man Sows," at the Park. The vaudeville bill at Keith's has many leading features. At the Palace, burlesque and vaudeville combined please the many patrons of that popular house. Two theatres open their regular seasons on Saturday night of this week, the Globe with "Wine, Woman and Song," and the Grand Opera House presenting "Convict 999." Wonderland at Revere Beach, and Paragon Park, at Nantasket, continue to present great free circus acts. Performances in the open-air theatre at Norumbega attract thousands, and Lexington Park pleases all who visit there. The tuneful light musical show, "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl," has another week at the Tremont.

Public Library, Copley Square. Founded 1852, is the largest library in America, and has over 550,000 volumes and 350,000 pamphlets. Erected in 1888-95 at a cost of $2,650,000. Most of the land was given by the state. The building is built of pinkish-gray granite. The building is two hundred and twenty-five feet long, two hundred and twenty-seven feet deep and seventy feet high. Joshua Bates, a native of Boston, but long a resident of London, England, gave $100,000 for the purchase of books, and since that time many generous individuals have given their large private libraries, and donated large sums of money for the use of the library. The city makes a large annual appropriation for the support of the library. (The old school building on Mason Street was the first building used for the library, and in 1858 a large new building was completed on Boylston Street. It was torn down in 1899.) The beautiful halls contain, beside the large number of books, many rare works of art, statues of bronze and marble, oil paintings, marble busts and many valuable historic relics of the city.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet quare inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

Strangers and tourists who wish to see historic Boston the best possible way, visiting all places of historic interest in and around the city, through the quaint streets and lanes to the ancient buildings of the old North End will be able to see and learn the most in the shortest time by going with F. A. Waterman, the recognized Boston Guide. See opposite page for times, etc.

When you know of a well-known house closing out a department it is well to take advantage of the bargains. Hall & Hancock Co., 420 Washington Street, are to discontinue the millinery department and everything must be sold. Trimmed hats, flowers, feathers, ribbons and veils.

Hewins & Hollis, the Outfitters, at 4 Hamilton Place, are showing a complete line of Allen, Solly & Co.'s hosiery and underwear.

Miss M. F. Fisk, at 144 Tremont Street, is showing a splendid line of Ladies' Gloves, in long and short lengths in the best makes and fashionable colors, also Tailored and Lingerie Waists, and hand embroidered collars and jabots so much desired at the present time, and what is indispensible to the well-dressed woman—becoming veilings.

The Russian Importing Company of 429 Boylston Street extends a cordial invitation to guests of Boston to visit their shop, where they exhibit "All handicraft of the Russian Peasant," which consists of Hand Drawn linen, waist patterns, laces, collar and cuffs, old jewelry, silverware, bronzes, brasses and copper. A specialty of this Shop is Hand Carved Woodenware.

If you use a Kodak or Camera, and do not do your own developing and printing, you should be interested to know that the Robey-French Co., at 34 Bromfield Street, have a special department for doing this work, in a superior manner. They guarantee that you will receive in your finished work all that it is possible for anyone to give you.

The Smith Patterson Company at 52 Summer Street, are showing a remarkable line of articles suitable for wedding gifts, not only in sterling silver and cut glass, but also in a very large variety of odd and unusual pieces that are not likely to be duplicated and that would make most acceptable gifts, in prices ranging from the very moderate-priced articles up through to the larger and more important pieces in Royal Vienna and choice pieces of ivory carvings.

Charles E. Lauriat Company's bookstore, opposite the head of Franklin St., is looking unusually enticing these days, as the result of a display of the contents of the preliminary shipments of Mr. Lauriat's purchases abroad this summer. The fine old books in particular are a very attractive lot and many curious, out-of-the-way books appear among them as well as scarce old editions of standard authors. They are well worth the time necessary to look them over.

For something original in summer neckwear Blanchard King Co.'s, 350 Boylston St., is a desirable place to visit.

Visitors passing through Boston and in want of something made of leather should not fail to visit the London Harness Company, in the John Hancock Building, 176 Devonshire Street. This Company is one of the best known in Boston for traveling bags, trunks, automobile supplies, and every requisite for the traveller.
